

Retrospective

What Went Well

By adopting Slack as our primary operational hub, the team now receives instantaneous notifications for every update made in Jira and GitHub. This integration has successfully bridged the gap between our AI logic, backend services, and frontend visualization, ensuring everyone stays aligned with the RippleWealth vision. The team showed strong collaboration and adaptability in addressing initial technical challenges.

Action Items for Next Sprint

To improve transparency, every weekly meeting will now require each member to present a concise summary of their technical accomplishments. Furthermore, we are instituting a mandatory mid-sprint progress check-in to proactively identify and resolve any technical blockers before they impact our final deliverables.

What Could Be Improved

We have identified that the submission of specific deliverables must strictly adhere to our internal deadlines. During this sprint, several late submissions occurred, which created minor bottlenecks in our overall development velocity.
